Re-Envisioning the Political Process in India, and Cuba, Algeria and China, even Israel.

By Shomit Sirohi

I. The influence of multinational capital and international finance > which then is busy financializing the process of the development of India, but also positively changing it to Moishe Postone as Sirohi which is about the logic of youth culture as Americanised and globalization supportive.

In fact the to prevent this process is to also understand the process of promoting Microsoft and Nike even Sony into India which then runs on niche ideas like just education packages and such structural adjustment programmes with World Bank and IMF along with conversations only with EU – which means for Europe. Now this process then is the process of commodities and culture which then is also about abstracting the financial culture of the capitalists as opposed to state propertism and that then becomes more World Bank led development and cities in fact – this process then is symbolic – like metro rides to universities which then covers again the Microsoft education stuff.

II. Imagining anti-capitalism therefore

Now that this process is negotiated as a fixed plan in fact the process of mixed-economics and state architectural parallax is also discussed from time to time which then is how the process becomes the fiscal budget and its deficit for in fact public policies and expenditure. Now in fact the process becomes anti-capitalism as in fact mass protest of the people and mass peasant protests and working class fundamental contradiction which then is the real meaning of re-envisioning Communism as in fact the process of subject and autonomous subject politics which then is against the objective process alone but also wants to intervene in the subject sense – now then we become more political and egalitarian.

III. Re-envisioning Communism – economic autonomy of the subject – for Cuba

In fact then Cuba goes for the maximal subject – that the politics then party in fact extends the democracy of the people, humanism and law and state economics to intervene in allowing the praxis of egalitarianism to win – this then is Algeria and China is also maximal with the state intervening for more such political praxis and limiting capital and negotiating with Deterior company to produce a capitalist style only in fact of living styles which then becomes the project of re-envisioning Communism.

In India this process is going more in the direction of in fact mass protest lines and negotiating with capital and even Americanisation for a youth culture. Deterior then is part of this cultural process called Moishe Postone-like with Israel and Hebrew cultural peculiarties..
